

Transcript

Coho Salmon

There were once 10's of thousands of Coho Salmon in Northern California rivers, but with habitat loss, legacy logging practices, and overfishing Coho populations are only a fraction of what they used to be. Now, working with timber companies, non-profits, private landowners, and others, we're restoring critical salmon habitat. My name is Bob Pagliuco and I'm a habitat restoration specialist with the National Marine Fisheries Service. Good stewardship takes all Californians.