

CALIFORNIA DEPARTMENT OF FISH AND WILDLIFE

A message about invasive species issues in California...

The California Department of Fish and Wildlife (CDFW) has started planning for the 2017 Quagga and Zebra Mussel Water Agency Summit (Summit). The Summit provides a venue for CDFW, water managers, and effected agencies to communicate new information, share ideas, and troubleshoot issues relating to prevention, control, and eradication of quagga and zebra mussels in California's waterbodies. The Summit will take place over two consecutive days in early 2017 (February - April). The second day will include a morning discussion, and may include an afternoon optional field trip depending on the location selected.

To help us develop a Summit that will be accessible and useful to you, please complete a short survey to capture your preferences for the Summit's location and content using the Survey Monkey link below. Please complete the survey by April 22, 2016.
