Address: 3435 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 385, Los Angeles, CA, 90010
Telephone number: (415) 420-4710
Email address: Ideehan@environmentcalifornia.org
2. Rulemaking Authority (Required) - Reference to the statutory or constitutional authority of the Commission to take the action requested: Authority cited: Sections 200, 205(c), 265, 399, 1590, 1591, 2860, 2861 and 6750, Fish and Game Code; and Sections 36725(a) and 36725(e), Public Resources Code.
3. Overview (Required) - This joint petition from Environment California and Azul requests minor or modest expansions for 6 state MPAs and the designation of one new State Marine Park in order to enhance protections for California's kelp forests – a critical ecosystem and habitat type that provides myriad benefits for both human and marine communities, and which has experienced significant declines in the last decade due to natural and human-related causes. In particular, the regulation changes put forth in this petition seek to enhance protections for resilient, stable, and persistent kelp forest patches as identified by recent analyses and peer-reviewed research. Proposed boundary and regulation changes include (see Table 1):
 - i. Cabrillo SMR - expand westward and northward by 15.2 sq mi
 - ii. Point Dume SMCA - expand westward by 4.6 sq mi
 - iii. South Point SMR - expand westward by 26.3 sq mi
 - iv. Gull Island SMR - expand northward by 1.8 sq mi
 - v. Point Conception SMR - expand eastward by 14.6 sq mi
 - vi. Natural Bridges SMR - expand southward by 13.7 sq mi
 - vii. Pleasure Point, Santa Cruz - designate 3.2 sq mi as a new State Marine Reserve

4. Rationale (Required) - The state of California has experienced significant losses of its kelp forest cover since the designation of the MPA network. While we could not know which areas would persist in the face of extreme threats at the time the MPA network was originally established, new data and research has since helped to identify kelp beds that have persisted and are most resilient in the face of climatic and other disturbances. Enhancing protections for the state's most resilient, stable, and persistent kelp forest patches now will allow us to preserve what we have left, and increase our chances of restoration in the future. Removing, to the extent possible, direct human impacts on these resilient kelp forests that are potential climatic refuges will not only help these areas persist, but will also enhance the state's restoration efforts for other kelp forests in decline. By focusing resources on the immediate protection of already identified important areas with outsized conservation benefits, the state can advance the goals of the Marine Life Protection Act, advance the new 30x30 target, and take a cost-effective approach to kelp restoration by protecting the natural regeneration potential of kelp forest ecosystems statewide.

Petition to Modify the CA Marine Protected Area Network to Enhance Protections for California's Most Resilient Kelp Forests

Joint Submission by Environment California and Azul

PETITION NARRATIVE

Overview

California has experienced severe losses of its kelp forests since the designation of its statewide MPA network. At the time the MPA network was established, we could not know which kelp beds would be most resilient in the face of climate-related threats. However, in light of new data and research identifying the location of the state's persistent and stable kelp beds, adaptive management of the MPA network to better protect these kelp areas is therefore of critical importance.

This petition seeks to strengthen the statewide MPA network's protections for California's most resilient, stable, and persistent kelp forest patches – preserving what we have left now, to increase our chances of successful restoration in the future. Removing, to the extent possible, direct human impacts on these resilient kelp forests that are potential climatic refuges will not only help these areas persist, but will also enhance the state's restoration efforts for other kelp forests in decline. These efforts will also benefit kelp-forest dependent species, such as endangered Southern sea otters and threatened species of abalone. By focusing resources on the immediate protection of already identified important areas with outsized conservation benefits, the state can advance the goals of the Marine Life Protection Act, advance the new 30x30 target, and take a cost-effective approach to kelp restoration by protecting the natural regeneration potential of kelp forest ecosystems statewide.

Importance and decline of California's kelp forests

California's kelp forests provide numerous and invaluable ecological and environmental benefits. These underwater ecosystems serve as critical nurseries for a wide variety of marine species, providing shelter and food for numerous fish, invertebrates, and marine mammals, including the endangered Southern sea otter. Kelp acts as a natural water filter, as it absorbs excess nutrients and helps maintain water quality by reducing the risk of harmful algal blooms. Kelp forests may also play a role in carbon sequestration, capturing atmospheric carbon dioxide and helping to mitigate climate change. In addition to their ecological importance, kelp forests offer enormous cultural and economic benefits to California. They hold enormous cultural and economic significance for many of the Tribes and Indigenous communities that call California's coastal waters home. They support thriving commercial and recreational fisheries, contributing to the state's economy. The beauty and biodiversity of these forests attract tourists and divers, bolstering the state's tourism industry. Moreover, kelp can act as a buffer against coastal erosion, protecting shorelines from the damaging impacts of storms and waves.

However, kelp forests in California have experienced a significant decline in recent years due to a combination of natural and human-induced factors. One of the most important drivers of this decline is the warming of ocean waters, which has been linked to climate change. Sustained elevated sea temperatures known as "marine heatwaves" have caused significant stress to kelp populations, leading to widespread loss of kelp stands, increased susceptibility of key urchin predators to disease, and exploding populations of herbivorous sea urchins. The recent 2014-2016 marine heatwave left California's kelp forests decimated, with over 90% of bull kelp reported lost in Northern California and significant losses reported across the state (Bell et al. 2023, Arafeh-Dalmau et al. 2023). Human activities have also played a role in the degradation of kelp forests. Overfishing and removal of key predators like sea otters, predatory fishes, California spiny lobster, rock crab, and sea stars have disrupted food webs and resulted in trophic cascades in these ecosystems, allowing herbivorous species to graze on kelp unchecked. Additionally, coastal development, pollution, and nutrient runoff degrade water quality and promote the growth of invasive species that outcompete native kelp. The loss of kelp cover across the state has widespread economic and ecological impacts, has led to the closure of the recreational red abalone fishery in Northern California and has hindered Southern sea otter population expansion, as great white shark bite mortalities increase where kelp cover has declined at the northern and southern edges of this iconic species' range (Nicholson et al. 2018, Moxley et al. 2019).

The decline of California's kelp forests since the time the MPA network was completed seriously threatens the state's marine biodiversity, fisheries, and overall ecological health and undermines the goals of the Marine Life Protection Act. This adaptive management review cycle is critically timed to respond to kelp loss. It is vital to increase protections immediately to confer as much resilience as possible to future disruptions.

MPAs and kelp forest conservation

Around the world, MPAs have been found to enhance the overall health and resilience of ocean ecosystems (Edgar et al. 2014, Jacquemont et al. 2022), and to promote long-term kelp forest stability (Peleg et al. 2023). By providing long-term protections for predator species within their boundaries - such as southern sea otters, California spiny lobster, rock crabs, wolf eels, and predatory fishes like California sheephead - MPAs help to regulate local populations of kelp consumers, thereby having cascading positive impacts on kelp growth and persistence (Eisaguirre et al. 2020, Kawamata & Taino 2021, House & Allen 2022, Heineke et al. 2023). Promoting intact food webs and natural ecological processes can also help to improve overall resilience in the face of other natural and man-made stressors that MPAs cannot directly mitigate, such as warming ocean temperatures and nutrient runoff (Roberts et al. 2017, Arafeh-Dalmau et al. 2023). Noting these benefits and abilities, the California MLPA specifically identified kelp forests as one of the habitats requiring greater protection (MLPA Section 2856\(a\)\(2\)\(A\)).

We have seen the benefits of long-term protection of California's kelp forests. The Decadal Management Review of the statewide MPA network found that, while kelp species across the state experienced large-scale declines during the 2014-2016 marine heatwave, “overall, kelp canopy was more stable and appeared to be more resilient inside MPAs” (CA MPA DMR 2022). The South Coast region’s kelp forests, in particular – where fishing pressure was highest before the implementation of the MLPA – seem to have benefited from protections, with increases in California sheephead and California spiny lobster within MPAs thought to help facilitate grazer suppression and lead to more stable giant kelp abundance during and after the marine heatwave (DMR Kelp Forest Technical Report 2021).

MPAs can also serve as a complementary management measure for kelp restoration. While California’s MPAs were not explicitly designed with the restoration of kelp forests in mind, MPAs in general are considered a form of indirect kelp restoration due to their ability to promote intact food webs through reduced fishing pressure, which in turn helps to reduce kelp grazing pressure, as described above (Hopf et al. 2022). In addition, stable kelp forests help to promote natural regeneration of nearby areas, by providing a supply of propagules to recovering populations close by (Arafeh-Dalmau et al. 2021, Giraldo-Ospina et al. 2023). A recent global synthesis of kelp restoration found that the most successful restoration projects are those located near existing stable kelp forests (Eger et al. 2022). MPAs that protect these stable kelp forests can help to promote their continued persistence by removing extractive or destructive activities, and potentially further boost kelp restoration efforts by promoting healthy predator populations that “spillover” into nearby areas (e.g. Lenihan et al. 2021), helping to reduce grazer pressure in a broader area (Kawamata & Taino 2021). Harnessing the power of these dense, stable, and resilient kelp beds for the natural regeneration of nearby areas using area-based protection can also free up much-needed resources needed for intensive, direct restoration efforts elsewhere.

Based on this new and growing scientific evidence base, the state should protect more of California’s most stable and resilient kelp forests now, in order to enhance the conservation benefits and ability of our statewide MPA network to meet the goals of the MLPA while giving kelp restoration efforts a leg up in the future.

Identifying resilient kelp forests in California

Since the creation of California’s MPA network, new research has emerged utilizing satellite and in-situ data over a decades-long year timescale to identify the kelp forests exhibiting higher levels of persistence and stability in California.

A multi-institution team of researchers used satellite data to provide high-resolution maps of the most persistent giant kelp and bull kelp patches in California during the last 35 to 38 years (Arafeh-Dalmau et al. 2021, Arafeh-Dalmau et al. 2023). Importantly, these studies analyzed the extent to which highly persistent kelp patches are protected within the state’s MPA network, and found that these important kelp forest areas are currently not adequately protected among regions. Only 20.9 % of the most highly persistent giant kelp forests in Central California, 8.4% in Southern California, and less than 1% in Northern California are fully protected in MPAs (Arafeh-Dalmau et al. 2021). Bull kelp is even less well protected – only 3.4% of the the most highly persistent bull kelp forests in Northern Central California, and 0.1% of those in Northern California are fully protected in MPAs (Arafeh-Dalmau et al. 2023). The authors of these studies recommend increasing protections for these important and highly persistent kelp forest areas.

In addition, the Ocean Protection Council recently funded the development of an ecologically-focused, spatially explicit prioritization tool to identify priority kelp restoration sites in California waters (Giraldo-Ospina et al. 2023). Notably, this research used in-situ data as well as satellite imagery to determine the stability and current status of kelp forests across California's coastline, making the resulting prioritization index particularly robust. Of particular importance to this petition, the tool identifies kelp beds that have been historically stable, that persisted or bounced back quickly during the 2014-2016 marine heatwave, and that are currently doing well compared to other kelp forests – namely, the most stable and resilient kelp forest areas in state waters. Characterized as “medium priority” restoration sites – that is, historically stable kelp beds that are currently in good condition – these areas have a large potential for enhancing the natural regeneration and/or successful restoration actions of nearby kelp beds. The authors suggest potential actions: “Monitor these sites for triggers that may warrant intervention; Defend these sites from current or future threats; and Study these sites to understand the mechanisms of resistance to the marine heatwave.”

In light of these new studies, and in line with the site classifications put forth by Giraldo-Ospina et.al, we strongly recommend the state take action to protect as much of these newly-identified, stable, highly resilient kelp forest patches as possible with well-protected MPAs in the coming years. Protecting these iconic, dense kelp beds is one of California's best shots at preserving – and eventually restoring – our critically important kelp forest ecosystems quickly and cost-effectively.

Proposed areas for additional or enhanced MPA protections

Using spatially-explicit data detailing where highly persistent kelp beds and “medium priority” restoration sites overlap, as outlined by Arafeh-Dalmau et al. 2021, 2023, and Giraldo-Ospina et al. 2023, we identified areas where additional protections are necessary to promote the continued persistence and stability of California's healthiest kelp forests (see Table 1).

Preference was given to areas already within or adjacent to existing California MPAs, recognizing the substantial scientific and stakeholder input involved in creating the original network through the MLPA process, and in order to adhere as much as possible to the original intent and science-based spacing guidelines provided by the SAT during the creation of the network. We recommend reducing spacing between MPAs in some places is necessary to increase the representation of these highly persistent and resilient kelp beds that have a greater chance of persisting into the future in our state MPA network. We also encourage the state to consider whether there are other areas of highly persistent and resilient kelp not included in this proposal that would be good candidates for new or expanded MPA protections.

To develop the proposal further, we collected information through interviews and other personal communications with scientists including Dr. Anita Giraldo-Ospina and Dr. Nur Arafah Dalmau, who graciously provided data, assisted with the interpretation of results to identify the recommended areas, and reviewed the proposal for accuracy. We also gathered expert input and data from individuals, local community groups, MPA Collaborative Network members, conservation organizations, and more. While their cooperation should not be taken as an endorsement, we greatly appreciate the information and guidance provided by these individuals which contributed to the overall accuracy and scientific validity of this proposal.

We did not focus on “high priority” restoration sites identified by Giraldo-Ospina et al. 2023, in order to avoid proposing MPA protections for areas that may require more intensive, direct restoration methods, such as grazer suppression activities, that are not currently permitted within MPA boundaries. However, we urge the state to consider what, if any, direct restoration activities might be compatible with different MPA designations within the state’s network (e.g. line 20 of the MPA Collaborative Network’s Vetted Regulation Recommendations), recognizing that the impacts of climate change may still degrade some kelp beds within MPAs in the future, and proactive restoration efforts may be warranted.

Finally, it should be noted that, while the general location and specific boundaries for proposed areas are listed in Table 1, we are happy to work with State and its partners to define the proposed areas and boundaries in more detail, keeping in mind CDFW MPA design guidelines and the state’s interest in taking a holistic approach for reviewing petitions and enhancing the network to meet the statewide 30x30 goal.

Socioeconomic impacts

Enhanced, long-term protection of highly resilient kelp forest areas will bolster the diverse stakeholders, interests and industries that benefit from our coastal marine resources. Low-impact, non-consumptive recreational activities such as diving, snorkeling, and surfing will be unaffected – and even enhanced – by expanded MPAs, which will also provide enhanced research and education opportunities. Short-term impacts to recreational and commercial fishermen will be outweighed by larger benefits in the future, as has been demonstrated here in California and around the world (Bucaram et al. 2018, Lenihan et al. 2021, Medoff et al. 2022). For example, an analysis of CDFW fisheries data found that regional and statewide fishery landings and values do not appear to have been negatively impacted by MPAs (Murray and Hee 2019), and an analysis of California spiny lobster fishery found that any short-term losses were compensated for by a 225% increase in total catch after 6 years of MPA designation (Lenihan et al. 2021).

Relevance to MLPA Goals and DMR Recommendations

Enhancing the protection of kelp forests in California aligns strongly with Goals 1, 2, 3, and 4 of the California MLPA. By safeguarding California’s most resilient and stable kelp forests, as detailed in this petition, we will preserve critical habitat for a diverse range of marine species, from endangered sea otters to commercially valuable fish species. Kelp forests play a crucial role in the recovery and sustainability of marine life populations, as they serve as nurseries and refuges for many species, including those targeted by fisheries. These vibrant ecosystems also offer intrinsic value by supporting biodiversity and exceptional natural beauty, and their recreational and scientific use and enjoyment make them vital for the public (MLPA Section 2856\(a\)\(2\)\(A\)).

In addition, the regulation and boundary changes proposed by this petition specifically advance DMR Recommendation #4 - “Apply what is learned from the DMR to support proposed changes to the MPA Network and Management Program”. The DMR found that California MPAs helped to promote kelp forest resilience and recovery during and after the severe 2014-2016 marine heatwave. In the face of increasing climate impacts and as we struggle to recover from recent kelp forest declines across the state, expanding the MPA network in key, targeted areas can help to ensure the continued persistence of our remaining, most resilient kelp forests.

Relevance to Broader State Processes, Policies, and Goals

We applaud the actions that the State of California has already taken to respond to the severe declines in kelp forest cover across the state, including recent commercial kelp harvest closures in Northern California, annual harvest limits in Northern California, and the initiation of a statewide Kelp Restoration and Management Plan. We strongly support taking a whole-ocean approach to ensuring sustainable and effective management of kelp in our state waters (Crowfoot et al. Objective 3.2).

The MPA changes proposed in this petition complement the state’s ongoing kelp restoration and management work. They will also help to reduce the state’s costs associated with kelp restoration – harnessing the ability of well-protected, resilient kelp beds to promote the natural regeneration of nearby areas, allowing the state to direct more of its much-needed resources and funding for intensive restoration efforts in harder-hit areas with little kelp cover left.

Finally, this petition aligns strongly with the statewide goal set by both Governor Newsom and the legislature to conserve 30% of our coastal waters by 2030. If implemented in its entirety, the actions proposed in this petition will see an additional ~1.5% of state waters protected in highly- to fully-protected areas, while helping the network to better achieve the goals set forth in the MLPA.

Highly persistent kelp beds identified by Arafeh-Dalmau et al. 2021 are depicted by light blue pixels. Priority kelp restoration sites characterized by Ospina-Giraldo et al. 2023 are shown using colored circles. “High priority” restoration sites are dark red, “medium priority” sites are bright orange, and “low” and “very low” priority sites are light and very light gray.

Existing California MPAs are denoted by red, purple, or blue polygons, and the 3 nm state waters limit is shown as a blue line.

TABLE 1 - Petition to Modify the CA Marine Protected Area Network to Enhance Protections for California's Most Resilient Kelp Forests

Name	Proposed action	Brief description	Proposed regulations and boundary change	Historical context	Notes
Cabrillo State Marine Reserve (SMR)	Expand by 15.2 sq miles	Large patches of dense, stable kelp forests exist along a large stretch of coast along Point Loma to the north of the very small existing SMR. Expansion is compatible with Cabrillo SMR's current goal to "protect diverse kelp forest, surfgrass, sandy seafloor, and intertidal and nearshore rocky reef habitat". Approximately 1,000,000 people visit the area annually which provides access to the ocean for thousands of school children and other groups. Recreational and subsistence fishing is common here.	No change in regulations. Maintain existing eastern and southern boundaries. Shift the western boundary to the edge of state waters per state MPA design and size guidelines, and shift the northern boundary to a visible geographic landmark at Swordfish Point to bring resilient kelp beds along the western shore of Point Loma within MPA protections. The new proposed boundaries would form straight lines, follow the mean high tide line, and follow the state waters boundary from the current southeast corner of the SMR to approximately the following coordinates: - Southwest corner: 32° 66.223' N lat. 117° 30.345' W long. - Northwest corner: 32° 72.539' N lat. 117°31.664' W long. - Northeast corner: 32° 72.529' N lat. 117°25.836' W long.	This area was initially included in a large proposed SMR ("Point Loma SMR", Proposal C) in recognition that this is an area of greater biological diversity than other areas. However, the state opted for a reserve far smaller than the science-based minimum size guidelines to avoid conflict with fishing grounds offshore.	To balance kelp forests protection with recreation and low-impact subsistence fishing, we are willing to consider the creation of a new SMCA alongside the existing SMR that allows for recreational hook-and-line fishing and spearfishing.
Point Dume State Marine Conservation Area (SMCA)	Expand by 4.6 sq mi	A large, dense, resilient kelp bed is located immediately west of the current SMCA's boundaries. We propose a small expansion of the SMCA to protect this important kelp bed. Currently, the SMCA protects nearly 16 square miles of sandy beach and seafloor habitat, rocky shores, kelp forests, surfgrass beds, an upwelling zone, and less than a quarter square mile of deep submarine canyon, which together create an area of high biodiversity. This SMCA also provides for excellent surfing, diving, tidepooling, and whale watching opportunities.	No change in regulations. Shift the western boundary to the edge of El Sol County Beach to bring the highly resilient patch of dense kelp forest just west of the current SMCA into MPA protection. The proposed new western boundary forms a straight line extending southward from the mean high tide line to the 3 nm state waters limit at approximately the following coordinates: - Northwest corner: 34°0413' N lat. 118°9063' W long. - Southwest corner: 33°9899' N lat. 118°9063' W long.	The kelp beds within the proposed expansion area were part of a historic SMP proposal ("Lechuza SMP", Proposal C) that sought to protect these persistent kelp beds along the Malibu Coast. This proposed SMP was not taken up by the state at the time, likely in favor of designating the Point Dume SMR/SMCA complex just to the east and to maintain spacing guidelines. In addition, the Point Dume SMR/SMCA boundaries were placed to the west of Point Dume in order to leave waters to the east of the point open/unprotected to accommodate for heavy commercial and recreational use - suggesting that the western side of the point was seen as less desirable for commercial and recreational interests.
South Point SMR	Expand by 26.3 sq mi	The Northern Channel Islands contain some of the largest remaining resilient kelp beds in state waters, although large portions of the islands have experienced die-offs and are rated as "high priority" sites by Ospina-Giraldo et al. 2023. The stretch of coastline to the northwest of South Point SMR on Santa Rosa Island contains one of the largest contiguous resilient kelp beds on the islands. The SMR currently protects around 13 square miles of ocean habitat including rocky reefs, sandy seafloor, surfgrass beds, and small patches of highly resilient kelp forests. Expansion would help to bring the large stretch of resilient kelp bed to the northwest under MPA protection, and is compatible with the SMR goal to "protect the rocky reef, kelp forest, sandy plain habitat found here". This area is remote and only accessible via boat. Backcountry beach camping along the South Point SMR shoreline is permitted from September 16 through December 3.	No change in regulations. Shift the western boundary of the SMR to the westernmost tip of Santa Rosa Island with protections extending south to the 3 nm state waters limit, bringing a large, contiguous patch of resilient kelp forest along the southwest coastline under MPA protections. The new western boundary should form a straight line extending south, connecting the island's westernmost tip and the 3 nm state waters limit at approximately the following coordinates: -Northwest corner: 34°0013' N lat. 120°2507' W long. -Southwest corner: 33°938' N lat. 120°2507' W long.	South Point SMR was established as one of the 13 Channel Islands MPAs in 2003 and re-established with no changes as part of the state MPA network in 2012.
Gull Island SMR	Expand by 1.8 sq mi	The Northern Channel Islands contain some of the largest remaining resilient kelp beds in state waters, although large portions of the islands have experienced die-offs and are rated as "high priority" sites by Ospina-Giraldo et al. 2023. A small area of unprotected coastline to the northwest of Gull Island SMR contains highly resilient kelp beds worth protecting. Expansion is compatible with the SMR goal to "protect the rocky reef, kelp forest, sandy plain habitat found here".	No change in regulations. Shift the northern boundary of the SMR to the mean high tide line along the southwest coastline of Santa Cruz Island, to bring the highly resilient kelp beds at Posa Anchorage under MPA protection. The new northern boundary should follow the mean high tide line until it joins with an extension of the existing western boundary, at approximately 34°000' N lat.	Gull Island SMR was established as one of the 13 Channel Islands MPAs in 2003 and re-established with no changes as part of the state MPA network in 2012.
Point Conception SMR	Expand by 14.6 sq mi	A very large patch of resilient kelp forest exists just outside the current eastern boundary of Point Conception SMR. Ospina-Giraldo et al 2023 identified this patch as having a lower risk of future losses compared to nearby kelp patches, and being valuable for natural regeneration and long-term monitoring ("cluster 2" in Hypothetical Use Case #4). Data from an existing shore-based radar system that has been deployed at the site since 2020 shows the area immediately east of the currently MPA appears to be used largely for transit, rather than fishing. Access to this area is currently limited, allowing for additional protections to confer high conservation value while minimizing socioeconomic impacts.	No change in regulations. Maintain existing western and southern boundaries, and shift eastern boundary westward between Arroyo San Agustin and Canada de la Agujas beaches to bring the large resilient kelp bed to the east of Point Conception SMR within MPA protections. The new eastern boundary should form a straight line between the mean high tide line and the 3nm state waters boundary at approximately the following coordinates: -Northeast corner: 34°45' N lat. 120°3445' W long. -Southeast corner: 34°40' N lat. 120°3445' W long.	The proposed expansion area appears to have been initially included in a larger proposed SMR during the MLPA planning process (South Coast Proposal C) in recognition of this area's biological and oceanographic importance. The rationale for the smaller current boundaries for Point Conception SMR is unclear from the historical documents provided.

Natural Bridges SMR	Expand by 13.7 sq mi	Multiple patches of resilient kelp forest exist just offshore from the current SMR boundaries. The original intent of this SMR was to protect the intertidal zone from tidepooling and shore fishing while leaving skiff fishing unimpacted. However, increasing climate impacts, the critical condition of the state's kelp forests, and strong public support for expanded protections, warrant a reevaluation and expansion of this SMR to protect these highly resilient kelp beds and newly vulnerable marine populations.	No change in regulations. Maintain existing western and eastern boundaries, and shift southern boundary out to the 3nm state waters limit to protect the resilient kelp beds and deeper habitats and pelagic waters per CDFW design and feasibility guidelines, as well as recently published peer-reviewed guidelines for climate-resilient MPA design (Arafah-Dalmau et al. 2023).	The Natural Bridges SMR was designed as an intertidal SMR, specifically to avoid socio-economic impacts. The preferred option of siting a SMR that extends to greater depth range (as identified in the IDC proposal) was not pursued in an effort to reduce socio-economic impacts by avoiding siting SMRs adjacent to Santa Cruz harbor.	To balance kelp forest protection with recreation and low-impact subsistence fishing, we are willing to consider a new Pleasure Point SMCA that allows for recreational hook-and-line fishing and spearfishing. In addition, to better protect the ecologically rich and biologically important waters of Soquel Cove nearby, we strongly suggest the state consider designating a larger State Marine Park (or State Marine Conservation Area allowing for all recreational activities) alongside, or in tandem with, the Pleasure Point detailed here for enhanced recreational and ecological benefits (see Appendix A letter from H. Nevins).
Pleasure Point SMR	Designate ~3.2 sq mi	A large, dense patch of resilient kelp forest exists just off Pleasure Point. The kelp beds of the northern Monterey Bay are some of the largest and most persistent in the state. This area in particular is a well-known and popular surfing location, with little commercial fishing taking place (pers. comms H. Nevins) and minimal recreational hook-and-line fishing and spearfishing occurring when surf conditions are flat. There are strong access points to the area, many educational and recreational opportunities, and a growing, colloquially named "shark park" nearby as the presence of juvenile white sharks increases. See letter from H. Nevins in Appendix B detailing the broader conservation value of the area.	We propose a no-take SMR to best protect this large kelp forest from all destructive and extractive activities. See Column F for an acceptable alternative, and additional consideration. Proposed regulations are as follows: "It is unlawful to injure, damage, take, or possess any living, geological, or cultural marine resource." Proposed boundaries range from the northeastern edge of Trees Beach along the mean high tide line to the tip of Soquel Point. From the mean high tide line, the proposed boundary extends south (offshore) by 2.5 sq mi, in keeping with CDFW design guidelines and recent peer-reviewed guidelines for climate-resilient MPA design recommending a variety of habitats and depth ranges be represented within an MPA (Arafah-Dalmau et al. 2023). While this area would not meet the state's minimum size guidelines, we recognize the importance of this area for recreational fishing and believe a strategically placed MPA of this size would protect as much of the kelp forest as possible while minimizing economic impact to the larger region, and providing conservation benefits to the broader region as detailed in Appendix A's letter from H. Nevins.	n/a	To balance kelp forest protection with recreation and low-impact subsistence fishing, we are willing to consider a new Pleasure Point SMCA that allows for recreational hook-and-line fishing and spearfishing. Re: Petition to Modify CA Marine Protected Area Network to Enhance Protections for California's Most Resilient Kelp Forests; Petition to Increase Level of Protection and Streamline Enforcement for Several California State MPAs

Dear President Sklar and Honorable Commissioners,

Environment California Research & Policy Center has one mission that drives everything we do: to protect our natural world. We envision a better, greener California: one that protects and restores more places where all life can thrive and offers us and our children the opportunity to live healthier, more enriching lives.

Azul is a grassroots organization working to conserve marine resources. We treasure the life-sustaining force of the ocean, as well as the physical and spiritual nourishment it provides us. We are a Gente powered and led effort, focused first on celebrating our rich Latino conservation traditions and connecting them to current solutions. Our work is based in authentic engagement, community building, and collaboration.

That's why we welcomed the goal set by Governor Newsom and his Administration of protecting 30% of lands and coastal waters by 2030 ('30x30'), which was codified with the passage of SB337 this Fall. This goal reflects the new scientific consensus that humanity must set aside much more of the ocean to sustain healthy marine life populations and ecosystems.

The State of California's network of Marine Protected Areas (MPAs), created by the Marine Life Protection Act (MLPA), has demonstrated that area-based marine protection works: during the state's recently completed Decadal Management Review (DMR), scientific analysis showed that the network has generally succeeded in protecting ocean habitats, increasing biomass of fishery-targeted species, and enhancing the climate resilience of California's coastal ecosystems.

However, the amount of coastal waters currently protected within the statewide MPA network falls far below the state's 30% goal. Only 12% of California state waters are covered in highly to fully protected areas – the types of protected areas known to provide the best conservation outcomes – and an additional 4% is covered in lightly protected areas that allow considerable human impacts within their boundaries. In total, 16% of state waters are currently protected within an MPA.

We must do more. Coastal and marine ecosystems face growing threats related to climate change and increased human use, as well as emerging threats from new ocean uses such as offshore wind and aquaculture. In the face of these threats, now is the time to make significant improvements to the existing MPA network via an adaptive management process to better protect our ocean and coastal resources in the future.

That is why we are submitting two petitions for rulemaking intended to strengthen the network's ability to conserve critical habitat types and better manage the network. Each of the two petitions stands on their own and are based on new and updated science that were not available to policymakers at the time of designating the original network. The areas we have proposed for expansion or strengthening are prime examples of where California's ocean life stands to benefit through new or updated permanent, area-based protections created under the MLPA.

The areas we are proposing are likely not the only areas that would fit the criteria for enhanced protection laid out in our petitions, nor are our criteria the only ecological criteria that could be used to systemically strengthen the existing network in line with the state's new 30x30 goal. We urge the Fish and Game Commission and all relevant state agencies to conduct analyses that will highlight the habitat types, species, and regions underserved by the current network, with an eye toward building a state MPA network that is resilient in the face of rising ocean temperatures, emerging threats, and continued pressure on endangered and threatened species.

Californians can be proud that we have led the way in ocean conservation over the past decades. It's time to take up the mantle of leadership once again, globally and nationally, not only to create a better future for the amazing life off of our own coasts, but also to inspire other decision makers to do so along every coastline, in every part of the ocean.

With your leadership, our groundbreaking marine protected area network can take its next leap forward.

Sincerely,

Re: Petition to Modify CA Marine Protected Area Network to Enhance Protections for California's Most Resilient Kelp Forests

Dear President Sklar and Honorable Commissioners,

We are writing in support of Environment California Research & Policy Center's petition to increase protections for remaining persistent kelp forests in California state waters through the Marine Life Protection Act (MLPA)'s adaptive management process. As kelp forests contend with increased threats from climate change, predator loss, and invasive species, taking action to preserve the highly persistent kelp forest areas that have so far withstood these threats will be critical to the state's efforts to conserve this essential ecosystem and achieve area-based conservation targets.

California's kelp forests provide numerous and invaluable ecological and environmental benefits. These underwater ecosystems serve as critical nurseries for a wide variety of marine species, providing shelter and food for numerous fish, invertebrates, and marine mammals. They support thriving commercial and recreational fisheries, attract tourists and divers, and can help dampen the impacts of coastal erosion and storm impacts. However, recent decades have seen a decline in kelp forest cover across the Pacific West Coast, including California, due to a combination of natural and human-induced factors such as a major marine heatwave and the loss of predators of kelp grazers by overfishing and disease.

Marine protected areas are a critical tool for increasing the resilience of kelp ecosystems in the face of these stressors. However, the state of California's MPA network has gaps in coverage for the state's most persistent kelp forests. Recent analyses identifying the extent of persistent giant kelp and bull kelp forests in California found only 20.9% of the most highly persistent forests in Central California, 8.4% in Southern California, and less than 1% in Northern California are fully protected.^{1,2} Improving the MPA network to better protect our remaining stable kelp forests will aid in increasing the resilience of these ecosystems and prevent further loss of kelp cover.

State officials should utilize all tools at their disposal to address the ongoing threats to kelp forests. Marine protected areas like those created through the California MLPA are a tool that has been underutilized in efforts to protect and restore our kelp forests—and one we cannot afford to ignore.

The state has an opportunity to incorporate these new scientific findings into the state network of marine protected areas, ensuring the network better addresses emerging threats to our kelp forests and provides the best possible support for restoration efforts. The petition submitted by Environment California RPC is supported by recent scientific analysis employing 35 years of satellite data to identify persistent kelp forests, and is based on extensive global research demonstrating the benefits of highly to fully protected areas.

Re: Support for new MPA to protect kelp, seabirds, and sharks of Santa Cruz

Dear President Sklar and Honorable Commissioners,

As a local seabird and marine ecosystem biologist, I am writing in support of a new State Marine Reserve proposed by Environment California and Azul to protect kelp, seabirds, and sharks in coastal waters of Santa Cruz County, CA. As climate change impacts ocean conditions, corresponding shifts in fishing behavior will create new risks for forage fish and place increasing pressure on ocean wildlife. Providing protections now for forage fish within critical nearshore kelp forests and sandy bottom environments is essential for mitigating future threats to migratory seabirds, whales, and sharks.

The proposed MPA off Soquel Point in Santa Cruz is positioned within the northern Monterey Bay bight, a biologically rich and unique marine region encompassing nearshore kelp forests, sandy beach, and deeper soft-bottom habitats. Physically, these waters are influenced by the Año Nuevo upwelling front and the area is characterized by a broad shallow shelf. These features create a unique ocean circulation pattern where freshly upwelled and nutrient rich cold-water eddies become slower and recirculate within this semi-enclosed bay¹. These waters are ideal growing conditions for phytoplankton, crustaceans and cephalopods, larval fishes and forage fishes (anchovies, sardines, herring), which create the base of the food web for predatory sharks, seabirds, and whales.

This biologically diverse area is recognized as important to more than 100 species of marine seabirds and shorebirds, mammals and sea turtles (Harvey & Benson 1997², Henkel 2006³, Neuman et al. 2008⁴). In the summer months, enormous flocks of Sooty Shearwater travel 20,000 km from New Zealand 20,000 km to feed on the anchovy schools (Figure 1) within the northern bight of the Bay (Figure 2) (Adams et al. 2012⁵). This annual natural feeding frenzy phenomenon is described as the “River of Birds” and is fueled by the dense nearshore aggregations of anchovies, which are also host to iconic lunge-feeding humpback whales,⁶ pelicans, and gulls.

An “Oasis Effect” has been described for these nearshore areas in California⁷ by which whales and other marine animals aggregate in large numbers to feed in nearshore “oases” of forage fish during times of poor food availability offshore. Similarly, Endangered Leatherback Sea Turtles travel from offshore areas to feed within the bight when ocean conditions nearshore favor jellyfish⁸. The connection between nearshore and offshore forage fish dynamics figures importantly in the future conservation of these globally connected migratory species⁹.

However, these areas are not protected from extractive uses including fisheries. Despite 30 years of protected designation within the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary, Adelaars et al. 2012¹⁰ found that the relative level of conservation, particularly within the northern bay sandy shelf area of the Sanctuary, is low. The Sanctuary primarily protects the waters from offshore oil and gas exploitation, but does not protect against the impacts of fishing and many other human activities which may compromise thriving marine food webs. Large important areas of nearshore sandy-bottom and kelp forest habitats in Monterey Bay remain unprotected (see Figure 7 in Adelaars et al.).

In addition, over the past 10 years our coastal ecosystems have seen significant shifts in the face of a changing climate. Warming waters – including intense episodic marine heatwaves – have caused mobile species to temporarily shift their geographic ranges to remain within suitable environmental conditions,¹¹ often increasing the chances for harmful interactions with fisheries and other human activities. In the Monterey Bay, warming waters have led to habitat compression for whales and other mobile marine species, causing them to move inshore more frequently to feed and resulting in record-high whale entanglements in fishing gear.¹² Other species such as Common Murre, Rhinoceros Auklets and Brandt's Cormorant engage in prey switching as a strategy to buffer prey availability¹³, utilizing species from kelp forests and nearshore ecosystems when offshore species are less abundant. Maintaining healthy nearshore environments with a diversity of prey sources for predators experiencing climatic stressors is critical for the climate resilience of the overall ecosystem. However, the very changes underpinning these shifts in wildlife behavior can also influence fisher behavior,¹⁴ putting pressure on these food webs at the very time that they're needed to maintain ecosystem resilience.

Conservation of healthy forage fish populations in the face of climate change is critical. A recent review highlighted the need for conservation of the prey base with regard to the seabird populations in California, noting that where humans and wild predators coexist, human fishers are far more efficient in their prey harvesting activities¹⁵. Further, a global review by Cury et al. 2011 suggested a precautionary approach of leaving one third of the fish biomass for the seabirds¹⁶. Both of these studies point to the need for establishing protections of forage fish for seabirds which are not exploited to full capacity. A new state MPA would strengthen protections for forage fish now, before shifting ocean conditions bring new threats to this area. The proposed MPA area is not currently not currently subject to any significant commercial take, making protecting this area now of minimal economic impact to existing fisheries.

Conservation in this area is aided by the participation of actively engaged citizen scientists. Citizens in Santa Cruz County are very concerned about marine conservation and actively participate in citizen science activities including water quality (Coastal Watershed Council), intertidal and subtidal monitoring (LIMPETS¹⁷, Reef Check California) and beach monitoring (BeachCOMBERS, Nevins et al. 2011¹⁸). Since 1997, citizen scientists have been monitoring impacts to marine birds and mammals in and around the proposed MPA, contributing significant evidence for understanding human impacts, documenting the recovery of species in the region, and complementing long-term monitoring efforts by the state.

Northern Monterey Bay is host to a multitude of ocean-focused activities and these have created a thriving nature-based economy: surfers treasure the waves of Pleasure Point from Soquel Point to Capitola; beachgoers enjoy tidepooling, birdwatching, fossil hunting, and fishing along the rocky and sandy shores of New Brighton and Seacliff Beaches. Recently, locals have called this area a “Shark Park”, due to the increased use of the area by juvenile white sharks as seen by drones. This natural phenomenon has created a boon for shark-ecotourism businesses based out of Santa Cruz and Capitola (Figure 3). An established MPA in the area would help provide long-term protections for this oft-maligned species which requires nearshore sandy beaches for growth and survival, while supporting local nature-focused businesses.

The proposed MPA would also amplify nearby land-based protected areas, including four California State Parks (New Brighton, Seacliff Beach, Manresa and Sunset State Beaches). Establishing a land-sea connection between terrestrial and coastal protected areas will not only enhance broader ecological ecosystem function, but could connect users within the proposed MPA to interpretive aspects of state parks, which offer extensive access (trails, beach access, RV and tent camping) and interpretive resources (rangers and visitor centers).

In summary, the proposed MPA would provide multiple species and habitats ecological benefits and greater resilience in the face of climate-related impacts and shifting fishing behaviors, as well as leverage local citizen efforts to increase coastal protection and enhancements for marine species. This effort would enable future generations to enjoy firsthand the natural phenomena of the River of Birds by migratory Sooty Shearwaters and the nursery area found to be important for juvenile White Sharks by protecting the basis of the food web in this ecosystem.

Thank you for considering this proposed designation.

Sincerely,

Re: Petition to Modify CA Marine Protected Area Network to Enhance Protections for California's Most Resilient Kelp Forests; Petition to Increase Level of Protection and Streamline Enforcement for Several California State MPAs

Dear President Sklar and Honorable Commissioners,

As scientists, researchers, and educators who work to understand our changing oceans and inspire the next generation of ocean stewards, we write to express our support for the expansion and strengthening of California's network of Marine Protected Areas (MPAs) to help safeguard the state's diverse marine ecosystems and ensure the long-term resilience of our ocean habitats.

Globally, the ocean is at a critical juncture, with escalating global temperatures, declining biodiversity, and a growing number of endangered marine species. California's coastal ecosystems have not been spared these global trends: Northern California has lost more than 95% of its kelp forests since 2014, and kelp forests statewide have experienced declines over the past decade.¹ Only an average of 55 Pacific leatherback turtles are now found foraging off California's coast every year, a notable decrease from the yearly average of 128 Pacific leatherbacks observed in the region from 1990 to 2003.² Marine heatwaves have doubled over the last 30 years and have become more intense and longer in duration, putting stress on California's marine species and ecosystems.³

Now, California has a unique opportunity to take bold, effective and science-based action to conserve its marine biodiversity by expanding its groundbreaking network of state MPAs. MPAs, like state parks on land, protect unique and important ocean habitats from destructive human activities that can damage the integrity of marine ecosystems. Globally and in California, strongly protected and well-enforced MPAs have been shown to be highly effective in conserving biodiversity, enhancing ecosystem resilience, and mitigating the impacts of climate change on our oceans.⁴ Well-designed and well-implemented reserves better preserve natural interactions within ecosystems, allowing for greater resiliency in the face of rising global temperatures and changing environmental conditions.⁵

California's network of MPAs, established through the 1999 Marine Life Protection Act, celebrated its tenth anniversary last year. The state's recent Decadal Management Review (DMR) analyzed a decade of monitoring data and showed that the MPA network has generally been effective at protecting ocean habitats and increasing fisheries-targeted species' biomass.⁶ Now, in the face of increasing threats, we need to build on this system and maintain California's role as a national and global leader in the effort to protect our ocean habitats.

That's why we, as scientists, researchers, and educators, urge you to expand and strengthen our state's network of MPAs via the adaptive management process of the DMR.

Specifically, we support the expansion of the MPA network to include additional protections for California's most resilient kelp forests. While these vital and iconic ecosystems have faced declines statewide in recent years, kelp forests in some areas have persisted or bounced back quickly in the face of marine heatwaves and other disturbances.⁷ By expanding protections for these resilient forests under the MLPA, the state can minimize direct human impacts in these relatively healthy areas, helping to ensure their continued persistence and enhancing the effectiveness of restoration efforts for declining kelp ecosystems nearby. Globally, kelp restoration has been most successful in places adjacent to/contiguous with healthy kelp forest ecosystems.⁸

It is also vital that existing California MPAs are able to achieve their stated goals of conserving biodiversity and ecosystem health. We encourage the state to consider increasing protections for MPAs that are currently only lightly or minimally protected, especially in places where weaker or more complicated regulations lead to poor compliance and enforcement. Research has shown that highly and fully protected areas, where few if any destructive or extractive activities are allowed, provide greater ecological benefits than lightly or minimally protected areas.⁹ The state's network currently protects 12% of state waters in highly- or fully-protected MPAs, as defined by Grorud-Colvert et al. (2021), which leaves 4% of the network lacking the most effective conservation protections.¹⁰ By expanding the level of protection to areas already identified as ecologically important, we can ensure that the area's vulnerable marine resources have the chance to recover and flourish.

Our ocean is not just a source of clean air, wildlife, and natural beauty but also a mystery that beckons exploration and discovery. It is our moral imperative to lead the nation and the world in taking bold actions to preserve the sea, ensuring its future and the well-being of the communities that rely on it for their survival and prosperity.

President Sklar and Honorable Commissioners, you have a chance to take up this imperative and champion the expansion and strengthening of California's network of Marine Protected Areas. By doing so, you will leave a lasting legacy of marine stewardship that will keep California at the forefront of ocean conservation, nationally and globally.

Thank you for your unwavering commitment to the welfare of our ocean and for considering this urgent matter. Together, we can ensure a healthier, more abundant future for the unique marine ecosystems that define California.

RE: Petition to Modify CA Marine Protected Area Network to Enhance Protections for California’s Most Resilient Kelp Forests

Dear President Sklar and Honorable Commissioners:

Northern California has lost more than 95% of its kelp forests since 2014, and kelp forests statewide have experienced declines over the past decade.¹ California sea otters are still listed as threatened under the Endangered Species Act, and one of the biggest barriers to this species’ recovery and range expansion is increased shark bites from a lack of kelp forest cover. Marine heatwaves have doubled over the last 30 years, and have become more intense and longer in duration, putting stress on California's marine species and ecosystems.²

In the face of these mounting threats, California has a unique opportunity to take bold and effective action to conserve ocean habitats and ensure a greater abundance of life off our coast. Over two decades ago, the state passed the groundbreaking Marine Life Protection Act (MLPA), which called on the state to use one of the most powerful tools for ocean conservation: marine protected areas (MPAs).

MPAs, like state parks on land, protect unique and important ocean habitats from activities that can damage ocean life. Areas that are strongly protected have been shown to be highly effective in conserving biodiversity, enhancing ecosystem resilience, and mitigating the impacts of climate change on our oceans.³ By providing areas that serve as buffers against climate change, fully protected MPAs adapt to changing environmental conditions because they better preserve natural interactions within ecosystems, allowing for greater resiliency.⁴

California's network of MPAs, foreseen in the MLPA, celebrated its tenth anniversary last year, and the state's decadal management review showed that MPAs effectively protect ocean habitats and increase fishery-targeted species' biomass. Now, we need to build on this system and maintain California's role as a national and global leader in the fight to protect more ocean habitats.

Protecting specific habitat areas, including the remaining areas of stable kelp forests is a crucial step in safeguarding our diverse marine species and ensuring the long-term well-being of our ocean environments.

We support the expansion of the MPA Network to include some of the most resilient kelp forests along California's coastline, by expanding Cabrillo State Marine Reserve, Point Dume State Marine Conservation Area, South Point State Marine Reserve, Gull Island State Marine Reserve, Point Conception State Marine Reserve, Natural Bridges State Marine Reserve, and by creating a new MPA around the beautiful kelp forest off Pleasure Point near Santa Cruz. While kelp forests have faced declines statewide in recent years, in these areas they have persisted or bounced back quickly in the face of marine heatwaves and other disturbances.⁵ By expanding protections for these resilient forests under the MLPA, the state can minimize direct human impacts in these relatively healthy areas, helping to ensure their continued persistence and enhancing the effectiveness of restoration efforts for declining kelp ecosystems nearby.

Enhancing the protection of California's kelp forests strongly aligns with Goals 1, 2, 3, and 4 of the MLPA by preserving natural diversity, sustaining marine life populations, protecting marine habitats for their intrinsic value, and improving recreational and educational opportunities while minimizing human disturbance. ⁶ Safeguarding resilient kelp ecosystems will ensure critical habitat preservation for diverse marine species, including endangered sea otters and commercially valuable fish.

Our ocean is a source of clean air, wildlife, and natural beauty, but also a mystery that beckons preservation and exploration. California has the opportunity to lead the nation and the world in taking bold action to preserve the sea, ensuring its future and the well-being of the communities that rely on it for their survival and prosperity.

Re: Petition to Modify CA Marine Protected Area Network to Enhance Protections for California's Most Resilient Kelp Forests; Petition to Increase Level of Protection and Streamline Enforcement for Several California State MPAs

Dear President Sklar and Honorable Commissioners,

Environmental Action was founded in 1970, on the first Earth Day, as a community of grassroots environmental activists working for a cleaner, greener world. We are submitting the following 2,487 signatures in support of Environment California Research & Policy Center's petitions for rulemaking in the state's adaptive management process for the California Marine Protected Area network.

Each of the 2,487 people signed the following letter:

Dear Governor Newsom,

Sea otters bobbing in the surf. Whales diving deep to feed. Seabirds flying above. Our state's coastline is home to wildlife, large and small. As Californians, we've taken steps to protect this ocean heritage by creating a network of marine protected areas that, just like state parks on land, help protect and restore ocean life.

I urge you to strengthen this network through the Decadal Management Review in line with your important goal of protecting 30 percent of our state waters by 2030. Specifically, I urge you to expand the network to protect the state's last remaining kelp forests, critical homes to fish and sea otters, and to strengthen existing areas that don't yet provide high levels of protection to ocean life.

With your support, California can expand this network of ocean parks to create a brighter future for the ocean life that calls our state home, and hopefully inspire others across the country and around the world to follow our lead.

Sincerely,

As a group that works to protect our most amazing and at risk wildlife across the country, we know that preserving and restoring habitats will be critical to seeing our ocean life thrive. Whether it's a return of sea otters to more of the coastline or more abundant seabirds flying above our heads, expanding and strengthening California's network of marine protected areas will create a more hopeful future for the wild animals that call the state's coastline home.

But the decisions made on California's coast will not only impact the state's wildlife: as with many environmental issues, California's actions here have the potential to reverberate far and wide. If the state acts with ambition during this adaptive management process to fulfill the state's 30 by 30 commitment, it can set the national standard for ocean conservation, leading the country and the globe forward to a better future for our oceans.

Re: Petition to Modify CA Marine Protected Area Network to Enhance Protections for California's Most Resilient Kelp Forests; Petition to Increase Level of Protection and Streamline Enforcement for Several California State MPAs

Dear President Sklar and Honorable Commissioners,

CALPIRG Students is a statewide, student-run, and student-funded organization that works to protect the environment, make college affordable, and promote civic engagement. We have over 20,000 dues-paying members across the UC system and have been on campus for almost 50 years advocating for students on issues that students care about most. As part of our ongoing efforts to win better protections for California's ocean, we are submitting 214 signatures from our supporters on campuses across the state in support of Environment California Research & Policy's petitions for rulemaking in the state's adaptive management process for the California marine protected area network.

Each of the 214 people signed the following letter:

To: Governor Gavin Newsom

Sea otters bobbing in the surf. Whales diving deep to feed. Seabirds flying above. Our state's coastline is home to wildlife, large and small. As students and young people, we are proud to live in a state that has taken steps to protect this ocean heritage for future generations. California's network of marine protected areas are places that, just like state parks on land, help protect and restore ocean life.

I urge you to strengthen this network through the Decadal Management Review in line with your important goal of protecting 30 percent of our state waters by 2030. Specifically, I urge you to expand the network to protect the state's last remaining kelp forests, critical homes to fish and sea otters, and to strengthen existing areas that don't yet provide high levels of protection to ocean life.

With your support, California can expand this network of ocean parks to create a brighter future for the ocean life that calls our state home, and hopefully inspire others across the country and around the world to follow our lead.

As young people, we are working everyday to tackle the most pressing problems facing our ocean, our climate and our communities. That's why we are heartened to see state leaders like

CALPIRG Students

Governor Newsom and the state legislature set bold and ambitious goals to protect more of our coastline.

But goals need to be followed by action to ensure the future health and abundance of our ocean wildlife and wild places. That's why our student members have been campaigning for better ocean protections, and why we are excited to have this opportunity in the Decadal Management Review to push our state's groundbreaking network of MPAs forward. An expanded, strengthened network will make our coasts more resilient in the face of climate change and give our ocean life a chance to thrive.

Thank you for this opportunity, and we look forward to working with you to continue to create a better future for California's coasts.

Sincerely,

Clara Castronovo
State Board Chair

Re: Petition to Modify CA Marine Protected Area Network to Enhance Protections for California's Most Resilient Kelp Forests; Petition to Increase Level of Protection and Streamline Enforcement for Several California State MPAs

Dear President Sklar and Honorable Commissioners,

In solidarity with the shared responsibility for the well-being of our planet, particularly the oceans and coastlines we hold dear, we are reaching out as college students to express our firm support for the amplification and extension of California's Marine Protected Area (MPA) network. Understanding the critical importance of maintaining stable kelp ecosystems and safeguarding conserved ocean areas, we are committed to ensuring the prolonged vitality of our oceans and the myriad marine species that inhabit them.

The state of our ocean is at a critical juncture, with escalating global temperatures, declining biodiversity, and a growing number of endangered marine species. Northern California has lost more than 95% of its kelp forests since 2014, and kelp forests statewide have experienced declines over the past decade.¹ Only 50 Pacific leatherback turtles are now found foraging off California's coast, a notable decrease from the 178 Pacific leatherbacks observed from 1990 to 2003.² Marine heatwaves have doubled over the last 30 years, and have become more intense and longer in duration, putting stress on California's marine species and ecosystems.³

In the face of these mounting threats, California has a unique opportunity to take bold and effective action to conserve ocean habitats and ensure a greater abundance of life off our coast. Over two decades ago, the state passed the groundbreaking Marine Life Protection Act (MLPA), which called on the state to use one of the most powerful tools for ocean conservation: marine protected areas (MPAs).

³ García-Reyes, Marisol, Andrew Leising, Rebecca Asch, Steven Bograd, and Tessa M Hill. Rep. Indicators of Climate Change in California, "Coastal Ocean Temperature", California Office of Environmental Health Hazard Assessment, 2022.

MPAs, like state parks on land, protect unique and important ocean habitats from activities that can damage ocean life. Areas that are strongly protected have been shown to be highly effective in conserving biodiversity, enhancing ecosystem resilience, and mitigating the impacts of climate change on our oceans.⁴ By providing areas that serve as buffers against climate change, fully protected MPAs adapt to changing environmental conditions because they better preserve natural interactions within ecosystems, allowing for greater resiliency.⁵

California's network of MPAs, foreseen in the MLPA, celebrated its tenth anniversary last year, and the state's Decadal Management Review (DMR) showed that MPAs effectively protect ocean habitats and increase fishery-targeted species' biomass. The DMR found that the older the MPA, the larger the increase in the biomass of fished species. Some ecological communities like kelp forests and rocky intertidal ecosystems within MPAs appeared more resilient and recovered more quickly after marine heatwaves than similar habitats outside MPAs.⁶ Now, we need to build on this system and maintain California's role as a national and global leader in the fight to protect more ocean habitats.

We support the expansion of the MPA Network to include critical, resilient kelp forests along California's coastline. While these vital and iconic ecosystems have faced declines statewide in recent years, kelp forests in some areas have persisted or bounced back quickly in the face of marine heatwaves and other disturbances.⁷ By expanding protections for these resilient forests under the MLPA, the state can minimize direct human impacts in these relatively healthy areas, helping to ensure their continued persistence and enhancing the effectiveness of restoration efforts for declining kelp ecosystems nearby.

It is also vital that existing California MPAs are able to achieve their stated goals of conserving biodiversity and ecosystem health. We encourage the state to consider increasing protections for MPAs that are currently only lightly or minimally protected, especially in places where weaker or more complicated regulations lead to poor compliance and enforcement. Research has shown that highly and fully protected areas, where few if any destructive or extractive activities are allowed, provide greater ecological benefits than lightly or minimally protected areas.⁸

As college students, we keenly feel the urgency to address the environmental crises, particularly along California's coast. Having grown up witnessing the impacts of climate change, it's clear that action is needed to limit harm to the environment. That's why we urge the Fish and Game Commission to make significant changes in preserving and protecting our vast ocean habitats, ensuring a meaningful and lasting impact for generations to come.

Our ocean is not just a provider of fresh air, diverse wildlife, and breathtaking scenery; it's also an enigma that calls us to explore and uncover its secrets. As college students, we believe it's our duty to be at the forefront of national and global efforts, taking bold steps to safeguard the ocean. This commitment ensures its future and the welfare of communities dependent on it for survival and prosperity.

In conclusion, we strongly urge you, Fish and Game Commissioners, to champion the expansion and fortification of California's network of Marine Protected Areas, with a particular focus on safeguarding kelp forests and reinforcing the protection of existing MPAs. By doing so, you will leave a lasting legacy of environmental stewardship.

Thank you for your unwavering commitment to the welfare of our ocean and for considering this urgent matter. Together, we can ensure a healthier, more abundant future for the unique marine ecosystems that define California.

Re: Petition to Modify CA Marine Protected Area Network to Enhance Protections for California's Most Resilient Kelp Forests; Petition to Increase Level of Protection and Streamline Enforcement for Several California State MPAs

Dear President Sklar and Honorable Commissioners,

From the foothills of the Sierras to the seaside of the Central Coast, Californians care about our ocean and the life that calls it home. That's why we are submitting the attached 7,549 signatures in support of our petitions for rulemaking in the Decadal Management Review adaptive management process.

Each of the 7,549 people signed the following letter:

Dear Governor Newsom,

California's coastline is home to stunning beaches, amazing wildlife, and is a true treasure for everyone who lives in or visits our state. That's why we've invested in protecting this ocean heritage through the creation of our state network of marine protected areas. Just like state parks on land, these areas help protect and restore ocean life.

Now we have an opportunity to strengthen this network through the Decadal Management Review. I urge you to use this process to advance your important goal of protecting 30% of our state waters by 2030. Specifically, I urge you to expand the network to protect the state's last remaining kelp forests, critical homes to fish and sea otters, and to strengthen existing areas that don't yet provide high levels of protection for ocean life.

With your leadership, California can expand this network of ocean parks to create a brighter future for our state's ocean life and continue to lead the country in ocean conservation.

Sincerely,

By expanding the state's MPA network to better protect areas of stable kelp and by strengthening protections for areas not currently achieving their conservation outcomes due to weak or confusing regulations, the state can help our coasts adapt and thrive in the face of rising temperatures and emerging threats.

With your leadership, we can create a better future for California's coastal ecosystems and the wildlife that calls them home.

Sincerely,

Laura Deehan
