Fish population: Occasionally some of the lake trout (Mackinaw) are caught especially during the spring when waters are cool and the lake trout move into the shallow waters. After that time the trout move into the deeper waters which are too far off shore to permit shore anglers to reach them.

A thriving rough fish population, Tui chubs etc, abound in the lake. Occasionally the rough fish make up a large percent of the sportsman's catch.

"If we can get our bait through the rough fish population to the bottom lower levels of the lake where the trout reside, we catch trout."
